WRITER SAYS BRITAIN AIMS AT SEPARATE NEGOTIATIONS

'Observer' Correspondent Stirs Tempest In France

SERIOUS CHARGE

London Plans Conference Of Neutral States, Charge

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 1.—According to the Diplomatic Correspondent of the Observer, if France refuses to give a written reply to the British questionnaire, it is very probable that the British Government will publicly declare that the present policy of France is leading to the ruin of Europe and that Britain will start negotiations with Germany on the basis of the German reparations offer of June 7.

If France refuses to participate in these negotiations, Britain will act independently and possibly a conference of neutral States will be called for the purpose of making a settlement with Germany apart from France.

The same correspondent asserts in regard to the conference of British, French and Spanish experts now being held at the Foreign Office with regard to Tangier that there is up to the present little prospect of an agreement.

Britain is urging the internationalisation of Tangier, while France is urging the full sovereignty of the Sultan of Morocco, which virtually means French predominance.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 2.—The article by the Diplomatic Correspondent of the Observer cabled yesterday has caused a sensation in Paris especially as it is the impression that it reflects the British official attitude. The Temps demands prompt disavowal by the British Government and describes the article as an ultimatum which can be compared to the German attempts at browbeating at the time of the Tangier, Agadir and Serajevo crises.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 2.—Most of the newspapers comment on the Observer's statement in a similar manner to the Temps.

Le Journal, however, reassuringly declares that there is no reason to suppose that it represents the feeling of the British Prime Minister, Mr. Baldwin. On the contrary, the paper affirms, Mr. Baldwin's policy has been directed very clearly towards resumption of contract with France in regard to the German affair.

Mr. J. Harold Dollar Again President Of American Chamber

Trade Body Elects Officers For New Year

Mr. J. Harold Dollar, it is announced, has been re-elected president of the American Chamber of Commerce, the new committee of which was named at the annual general meeting of the organisation last Friday.

Mr. V. G. Lyman, of the Standard Oil Company, has been elected vice-president; Mr. S. R. Brown, of the International Banking Corporation, treasurer; Mr. J. B. Powell, of the Weekly Review, honorary secretary, and Mr. D. J. Lewis, secretary.

Carberry To Go On Trial Today On Bigamy Charge

Charles C. Carberry, an American employed by the British Cigarette Company in Pootung, will go on trial before Judge Charles Sumner Lobingier in the United States Court for China this morning charged with bigamy.

Carberry is alleged to have married Miss Frances Newman in New York, and then to have married Miss Evprazia Zimina, a Russian girl, shortly after his arrival here a year ago. Carberry will be prosecuted by United States District Attorney Leonard G. Husar, and defended by Major C. P. Holcomb.

Former Pao Tzu Ku Bandits, Now Troops To Protect Travellers

One brigade of infantry to be picked from the ex-bandit troops under Sun Mei-yao will be entrusted with the job of protecting travellers on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway according to information received in Peking.

The troops, who before their enrollment in the army formed the band of Pao Tzu Ku bandits who raided the Tsinpu Express on May 6 and captured 27 foreigners and over 100 Chinese, will be stationed by Tuchun Tien along the Shantung-Chihli border. It will be their duty to protect the trains against bandit raids.

Shanghai ex-captives who were their 'guests' at Pao Tzu Ku for 38 days will have the pleasure of meeting them again when they travel—if they can recognise "Monkey Face," "Big Lip" and some of the others in uniforms!

SURVIVORS TELL TERRIBLE TALE OF SUFFERINGS

Trevessa Men Tortured By Thirst, Eight Die In Boat

(Reuter's Service)

Port Louis, July 1.—The conclusion of the tragic story of hardships, sufferings, heroic struggles, thirst, hunger and tempestuous seas was unfolded on the arrival of the remaining survivors of the crew of the Trevessa.

It was four o'clock in the morning on June 29 when a fisherman encountered the second boat in a perilous position in the high sea, took it in tow and reached the shore five hours later.

The survivors were exhausted and were crying their thankfulness and begging for drink, after which they desired to see a priest. They were so weak that they had to be disembarked on a stretcher and conveyed in a motor-car to the nearest hospital.

The Chief Officer, narrating his experiences after parting company with the first boat, describes lack of water as the greatest horror. They were rationed to two tablespoonfuls daily until June 15 when their supply gave out. Their sole food was half a biscuit each day throughout the whole time. During the last fortnight they depended on rain, caught in their hands. Four Indians drank sea water and died.

Four Britons shortly afterwards succumbed to heart failure, and another Indian died within few hours of sighting land. Their difficulties were accentuated by lack of the compass which was out of action. The south-east trade winds were erratic in direction and velocity, and sometimes compelled the reefing of the small sail.

There was fortunately a sextant aboard, but it was useless during the last few days when the weather was very rough, preventing them from making Rodrigues Island. Mr Smith paid very warm tributes to his comrades for their super-excellent behavior.

All are rapidly recovering.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—Reuter's correspondent at Rodrigues Island telegraphs that but for the keen lookout and the prompt measures on board the Government supply ship, Secunder, which calls at the Island five times a year from Mauritius, Captain Foster and his companions from the Trevessa would no longer have been able to master the situation and must have dashed to destruction on the wicked reefs. As it was, the rescue was only effected in the nick of time.

The Secunder's arrival was delayed owing to plague at Mauritius; otherwise she would have departed on her return voyage before the Trevassa's boat hove in sight. She was on the eve of starting when at nightfall, out of the cloudladen sky and on the hoisterous sea, Policeman Gretry, who was on duty on board the Secunder, espied a craft making straight for the reefs 100 yards away.

The Constable's hailing shout evoke' the reply: "Shipwrecked. Twenty-three days at sea." Gretry with a fellow-constable and three fishermen jumped into a boat alongside and told the Trevessa's

Alleged Favoritism Of Japanese Caused Battle Among Russ Refugees

1,000 Engaged In Hand-To-Hand Fight With Guns, Knives And Clubs—Two Generals On Board "Eldorado" At Woosung

The battle between two factions of Russian refugees at Gensan in which 114, including General Glieboff, were killed, resulted from a long standing feud between Generals Glieboff and Liebidoff and their followers over the question of working for the Japanese, according to information received by THE CHINA PRESS yesterday.

More accurate information gives the total killed as 114—70 Cossack followers of General Glieboff, and 44 followers of General Liebidoff. The battle occured just outside of Gensan, where the refugees have been living. For some time, according to refugees on board the "Eldorado," which is still anchored off Woosung with 700 men, women and children, including General Liebidoff, on board, the two factions have been at swords' point as a result of a working agreement they entered into with the Japanese authorities.

The Japanese, not content with furnishing the refugees food and lodging gratis, are reported to have called General Liebidoff—whom they have supported since the arrival of the refugees in Korea—to Tokio for a conference. Upon his return the refugees were divided into three companies and set to work constructing a Japanese railway line. The work battalions were stationed at Gensan, between Gensan and Pasyat, and between Gensan and Seoul. They were paid between 30 and 40 cents a day as they laborers and furnished with food.

BITTER FEUD

Almost from the arrival of the Russians at Gensan there has been a bitter feud between Glieboff and Liebidoff over the question of leadership among the refugees. Liebidoff is reported to have been the more popular with the mass of the refugees but Liebidoff was better supported by the ex-Cossack soldiers as well as having the unofficial support of the Japanese. Both factions entrenched themselves in separate areas in Gensan, and both established prisons on board two of the Russian vessels they had in which adherents of the opposite party were imprisoned.

The feud came to a head a short time ago when the followers of Glieboff alleged that Liebidoff was being favored by the Japanese unduly, and that the Glieboff adherents had to work long hours on the railway construction and secured small and poor rations, while the followers of the favorite were allowed to loaf on the job and secured more pay and better food.

HAND-TOHAND FIGHT

The climax was reached when two small groups of the factions became engaged in a hand-to-hand fight. Both shouted for more of their friends and within a few minutes approximately 1,000 were engaged on both sides. A few had revolvers or rifles, but the majority depended upon their knives and clubs and stones. Reports say that Japanese police allowed the fight to go on for a period and when they finally called a halt to the hostilities 114 had been killed and many wounded and injured.

Following the fight the Japanese allowed General Liebidoff to take 700 of the refugees on board the "Eldorado" and sail for Shanghai, leaving Admiral Besyar and M. Backshaff, president of the Russian group, in power with three ships. In addition to General Liebidoff it is said that General Anesimoff, Ataman of All Cossacks, is also aboard the "Eldorado" although he has not been seen by the rest of the refugees since the vessel left Gensan.

Yesterday was a holiday and as far as could be learned no action was taken either by the Chisese authorities or the Customs officials. The vessel is held at Woosung as the Chinese have refused the refugees permission to land, but as far as could be learned last night no arms or ammunition have been seized by the authorities. Despite the anti-landing order a number of the refugees are slipping ashore, just as they did from Admiral Stark's fleet, and Shanghai's already overcrowded Russian colony has received a number of new recruits.

A Central committee composed of Mr. G. E. Peet, Mr. S. W. Wolfe, Mr. Claude Morgan, Mr. Blumenthal, Mrs. W. A. White and Miss M. Jensen was appointed to consider the question of the Russian refugee problem at a meeting held on Friday at 5 North Soochow Road.

STATE DEP'T SOON TO MAKE FINAL RULING ON RUM

Drys Demand Drastic Action Against Foreign Ships

(BY UNITED PRESS)
(Special To The China Press)

Washington, July 2.—The State Department in the near future will make an announcement that is expected to settle the present dispute concerning the importation of sealed liquor on foreign ships, or create an international question by ordering the seizure of all ships with liquor aboard as well as the stocks of liquor.

It is generally believed that the United States will be able to reach an agreement with the foreign Powers involved so that the entire question will be settled without long drawn out and perhaps serious international complications.

Foreign liners are arriving faster than the Customs can search them under the extremely thorough search that is now being instituted. Ten are now waiting at docks to be searched before they are given clearance papers.

Prohibition leaders in all section of the country are beseiging the White House and their representatives in Congress with pleas for drastic measures because of the continued defiance of American laws by foreign ships. President Harding is also receiving a large number of requests on his trip that the ships be seized for violations.

(BY UNITED PRESS)
(Special To The China Press)

Chicago, July 1.—Chairman A. D. Lasker of the United States Shipping Board, in a statement given to the press on his retirement, predicted that Congress will have to legislate permitting foreign ships to enter American ports with sealed liquor on board. Such legislation is the only safe outlet from the present situation, Mr. Lasker said. Otherwise the United States will be faced with increasing important diplomatic disputes.

Foreign ships must cease flaunting the American laws, however, Mr. Lasker declared, as the question is not one to be fought out by individuals or shipping companies, but must be settled between the respective governments. If ships continue to bring huge consignments of liquors, Mr. Lasker said, the heaviest possible fines will be imposed. The foreign ships, he said, are attempting to coerce and intimidate the United States but America's rights are clear and all ships violating the court decisions are liable to the most severe penalties just as American ships would be if they violated the laws of any other country. He predicted that the American authorities would stand pat on the present interpretation of the law until it is changed by Congress.

IMMIGRANTS FLOCK TO U.S., 7 COUNTRIES EXCEED QUOTA

Bureau Announces 357,000 Are To Be Admitted

PORTS THRONGED

Employment Agents Are Greeting New Arrivals Eagerly

(BY UNITED PRESS)
(Special To The China Press)

Washington, July 2.—The immigrants will be allowed to enter the United States in the fiscal year that began yesterday. The quota of seven countries has been exceeded in the first two days of the new fiscal year and Ellis Island, the New York immigration station, is swamped with thousands of incoming and prospective Americans.

Immigration officials at New York are wirelessing incoming immigrant ships diverging them to Boston and other ports to avoid dangerous congestion at Ellis Island.

Thousands of immigrants are coming over the border from Canada where they went prior to the beginning of the fiscal year and are now making dashes over the border or embarking for American boats on coastwise vessels.

Reports from American consular officials in Europe and Asia indicate that the quota from practically every country will be filled before autumn, while many countries have already filled their allotment.

Employment agents who are seeking cheap labor from some European countries are extremely active in attempting to secure the admittance of immigrants they hope to employ as workmen.

(Reuter's Service)

New York, July 1.—Sixteen steamships, carrying over 80,000 immigrants, anchored outside the harbor, awaited the stroke of midnight last night when they dashed for the harbor to land the immigrants before the July quota is exhausted. Three official watchers timed the race to prevent a dispute as to which was the first to reach quarantine. The cramped conditions on Ellis Island, where only 1,600 beds are available, are expected to add to the misery of the immigrants, many of whom will undoubtedly be deported owing to the excessive numbers seeking admission. The July quotas of at least seven countries will be exhausted on the first day of the month.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—There was equal keenness on land as by sea on the part of New York immigrants to enter the United States before the July quota was exhausted. Thousands of them lined the Canadian border and rushed across as the first day of the new month broke, disorganising the official arrangement.

Ships from Asia and from Africa brought more immigrants than the quota allows.

Great Britain And United States Not To Hive Air Race

(BY UNITED PRESS)
(Special To The China Press)

Washington, July 2.—The War Department today made an official announcement stating that Great Britain's increased aircraft program will not cause an increase in the American aircraft program.

It is the general impression in well informed governmental circles that President Harding's recent call for a conference to discuss the limitation of war aircraft will make an aircraft construction race between the United States, Great Britain and any other country, unnecessary. Many believe, however, that President Harding should not wait for Congress to convene but should begin immediately to plan the conference.

The general impression prevails that the United States and Great Britain are both sincere advocates of disarmament and will carry out the spirit of the Washington agreement despite the fact that such agreement did not deal with the question of aircraft.

Dozen Houses In Sinza District Collapse As Pipe Breaks

Two Chinese were killed and nine injured and a dozen houses collapsed when a water main burst Sunday morning on Sinza Road near the Ta Wang Miao Temple. The two death victims were apprentices of the Yung Kee Barber Shop, 449 Sinza Road, while the injured were shopkeepers of the other houses that fell on account of the caving in, including Nos. 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 447, 448, 449 and 450.

The bursting of the pipe took place at about 5:25 a.m. when a stream of water under high pressure flooded out of the main. The district was entirely flooded within a short time and it was only after two and half hours work by the staff of the Shanghai Waterworks that traffic could be resumed.

CONSORTIUM TO MAKE STUDY OF CHINA'S LOANS

Representatives To Investigate Whole Situation

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—The report of the China Consortium states that at the meeting of the Council, recently held in Paris and attended by representatives of the British, French, American and Japanese groups, it was decided to instruct a group of representatives to examine in consultation with their respective Governments the existing floating debt of China, including all loans unsecured or of which the security seems likely to prove inadequate, in the near future with a view to formulating a comprehensive scheme for debt consolidation.

The Consortium refer to criticism of their objects and refute the popular supposition that they are endeavoring to harvest undue profits, reaped from loans forced upon China under the protection of their Governments. They declare, on the contrary, that it has been by consistently refraining from lending that their principal success has been achieved in encouraging the utilisation of native savings before recourse to foreign capital and in arresting the profligate expenditure which was heading the country straight for bankruptcy. They claim to have ended the financial penetration of China and that they are the chief barrier between China and the policy of "interest." The Consortium declare that China today presents by far the largest undeveloped field for commercial expansion, and they believe that undesirable results would follow removal of the restraint exercised by the co-operative action of the Consortium. Emphasis is laid on the point that the Consortium's settled policy is to refrain from interference in China's internal politics and that their role is limited to an endeavor to assist the Chinese authorities, if requested, in re-establishing economic and financial equilibrium.

The report denies that the project of a loan secured on the land tax has been or is under consideration.

The report states that the present upheaval in China precludes immediate hope of giving practical effect to proposals for an administrative loan but that conditions change so rapidly that the groups must always be prepared for action when China again attains such a degree of peace and security as to afford reasonable prospect of a stable Government, but industrial, including railway, loans are in a different category. Provided adequate security can be obtained there seems no reason why further development of railway communication in China should await

BANKS HERE NEED MONEY, INTEREST UP TO 11 PERCENT

Heavy Demand For Funds Causes Rates To Harden

NO STRINGENCY

Chinese Have Loaned 5,000,000 Taels At Big Profit

BY DAVID ARAKIE

The present outstanding feature of the money situation in Shanghai is the fact that the foreign banks here are in dire need of funds and money of all sorts is in great demand. Fortunately for the interests involved, there is no evidence of stringency noticeable in the Chinese quarter, but the persistent call for accommodation has hardened the rate of interest for short term loans considerably. Foreign banks are now offering as much as 11 percent against 9 percent paid and secured a fortnight ago.

The contraction of funds at the disposal of the Western institutions, which has been indicated during the past month in an acute form, has reduced the money market almost to poverty, and the past four to five weeks have been borrowers going to the Chinese banks for large amounts.

During the past ten years, it is estimated, no less than five million taels have been lent out on call to foreign banks at 11 percent and it is opined that if the situation does not show signs of easing shortly we might see much higher rates of interest commanded. With this assistance to the other banks by the Chinese institutions when money threatens to be expensively firm, the position has eased off for the time being, but the question is, how long will the Shanghai money market be under the shadow of this spectre of large borrowings by foreign banks? It is generally accepted that this spasm of stringency is not artificially created, and the talk is that money will not develop any great easement until trade revives substantially.

NO DIFFICULTIES

One of outstanding features of the monetary stringency is the comparative absence of financial difficulties. This satisfactory result is, of course, due in large measure to sound management. The unfavorable effects of the economic crisis experienced by Shanghai bonds two years ago are still with us and with the banks. The latter have been committed to "carrying" a number of institutions until the current of improved trade, on which we are all urging forward, swells into the full tide of prosperity. But for the timely assistance rendered to these firms by the various bankers in the Settlement we would have experienced an economic catastrophe unparalleled in the commercial history of Shanghai. Although there has been a certain amount of recovery in trade, it has not been of a volume that could release the local banks of the great burden shouldered by them.

There is a good deal of speculation in the financial district as to what extent the Chinese banks could afford to provide funds. The general belief last month was that the stringency felt by the foreign banks was the result of financing the silk and tea crops, but a closer examination of the situation fails to substantiate this belief. The amount of commercial bills daily coming on the market is extremely small, and if we take this as correct and as a criterion it is a very fair assumption that in most cases the demand is the result more of the obligation of some institutions to "carry" their clients until port is sighted than anything else. Naturally, this tends to diminish the supply of available credits at the financial centers.

BOYCOTT EFFECT

In the case of the Japanese banks tight money is principally the result of the boycott, and many of these Japanese banks are now in the open market for loans. Perhaps it is quite natural that the difficulties resulting to Japanese trade by the foolhardy boycott movement initiated by the Chinese students should result in the Japanese banks coming to the assistance of their clients. The immediate prospect of a removal of this blight to the Sino-Japanese business is certainly not hopeful.

Another feature of exchange is the big difference between cash and forward sterling for each month, which is only a reflexion of the rigid tone of the money.

The lull which has existed in trade has brought considerable funds to the vaults of the Chinese banks. In the ordinary course this would in previous years have gone to the foreign banks, but since the indigenous modern institutions began to multiply the Chinese banks have become the depositories for the bulk of Chinese capital. So far as actual banking statistics show the financial condition is sound. If banking figures can be taken as a plain and safe guide to the monetary position there is nothing unhealthy about the present condition.

Del Monte Ballet Scores Big Hit

The new ballet at the Del Monte is a knockout. So said the big Sunday night crowd—a crowd that filled the house to capacity. Those Del Monte show girls are surprisingly versatile, the ballet spectacle this week being decidedly novel as well as beautiful to look upon. It is a startling thing, the most unique show of its kind ever offered in the city.

And it "went over," big. The Del Monte crowd Saturday and Sunday nights filled the cafe to capacity, and then overflowed into the boxes, the hallways, windows, doors, verandas, and every available space from which a peep of the show might be had. All wanted to see the new ballet.

It is called the "living statues" ballet, and consists of a series of striking poses and formations by the famous "dainty dozen" Del Monte chorus girls.

The ballet has been pronounced by those who saw it Saturday and Sunday night as the best yet offered by the popular cafe, and that is saying a mouthful, as everybody in Shanghai knows that some striking ballets have been shown there.

That Shanghai appreciates the efforts of the Del Monte management to give real entertainment, and to give it first, is shown by the crowds that attend the shows, thus proving that Shanghai people like good shows, good music, good singing, good food, and good fellowship—all of which are found at the Del Monte.

London Plans To Protect Nationals

Statue Of Sheng Kung-pao Is Unveiled At Nanyang; Ferguson Gives Address

Memory Of Late Statesman And Founder Of Local University In Honored; Speaker Tells Of Career

Tribute to the ideals and accomplishments of the late Sheng Hsuan-huai, or, as he was better known, Sheng Kung-pao, was paid in an address delivered before a large assembly by Dr. J. C. Ferguson on the occasion of the unveiling of a bronze statue of the former high official, businessman and patron of education at Nanyang University, which he founded.

The unveiling ceremony followed the school's commencement exercises, at which Dr. Ferguson also delivered an address. His speech in connection with the unveiling of the statue follows:

"For twenty years I was closely associated with Mr. Sheng. When I first knew him he was usually called Sheng Taotai and in later years was known as Sheng Kung-pao, both of these referring to his official status. He rose to the high rank of President of the Ministry of Communications and Junior Guardian of the Heir Apparent but his official career was only one phase of his busy life.

"He helped to found the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company and directed its affairs for many years. He promoted the telegraph system in China and was its Director General until it was taken over by the Government. He started the bank which is now known as the Commercial Bank of China and took an active share in its policies. He was the controlling stockholder in the Hwasheng Cotton Mill in Yangtszepoo and managed its business. He employed mining engineers to prospect for him and discovered the coal mines at Ping-hsiang and the iron ore at Ta-yeh. On account of his ownership of these mines the Hanyang Iron and Steel Works were handed over to him by the Government and finally became incorporated into the Had Yeh Ping Company.

OFFICIAL POSTS

"In official life he held the posts of Taotai at Chefoo and Tientsin. He was Director-General of Railways and during his term of office built the southern section of the Peking-Hankow line, commenced work on the Canton-Hankow and Shanghai-Nanking lines, made the contract for the Tientsin-Pukow line and commenced negotiations for the purchase or construction of other lines. He also dealt extensively in real estate and was the owner of valuable properties in Shanghai, Soochow, Tientsin and Peking.

"During these years of ceaseless activity he found time to build for himself a large residence on Bubbling Well Road and included in his compound the former residences of W. H. Drummond and Paul Brunat. In Soochow he purchased the famous Liu Yuan, by the side of which he built another home. In Peking he had a residence in Fu Hsioh Hutung. He loved beautiful things. He collected porcelains, ink, writing tablets, as well as paintings and manuscripts. He collected also a large number of books and erected a library adjoining his Shanghai home to hold them.

"If Sheng Hsuan-huai had only accomplished such results in official and commercial life as I have mentioned he would have established the right to a place in the memory of his countrymen, but greater and more enduring than anything else which he did was the founding of this College. He had had a share with his patron, Li Hung-chang, in the founding of Tientsin University but was not wholly satisfied with the results achieved on account of the lack of a sound preparation in their own language and literature on the part of many pupils. He desired to do something for the sons of the literary classes of Wu, his native place, most of whom were unable to pay for a modern education. He decided to fix a high standard for admission, to secure eminent teachers of Chinese literature and thus to build this college into the structure of the new educational system of China. Everything which the pupils learned from text-books in foreign languages they should be able to express clearly and elegantly in their own language. Such was the high ideal of the founder of this College. He believed in American ooh. hom rohm rohm modern education but he loved also the literary tradition of his own country. It was his conviction that the only way in which modern education could win for itself a permanent place in China was by expression in dignified correct literary form. He feared the lowering of educational standards which would result from the acquisition of modern learning to the neglect of a sound education in Chinese literature and literary expression. The founding of this College was not only the greatest work of Mr. Sheng but it is now the first to record his greatness by the erection of this bronze statue. Here he will live forever in the affection and respect of succeeding generations of students.

MANY ACHIEVEMENTS

"Sheng Hsuan-huai was a man of so many remarkable achievements that it is not easy to point out his leading characteristics. I knew him intimately as an official, a business man, and as the founder of this College, but it is in his noble qualities of manhood that I prefer to think of him. He was open-minded. After this College was started in 1897 in temporary buildings he presented us a site near the Arsenal at Kao-ch'ang Miao. I did not like it and after consultation with my colleague, Mr. Ho Mei-sun, decided not to accept his gift but to purchase the present site. He was in Peking at the time and did not know of the change until his return when he found building operations already begun on the new site. After I had fully explained my reasons for the change he heartily approved of it and commended me for having taken the responsibility for it in his absence. He was diligent. He never wasted time. Often he worked into the late hours of the morning preparing drafts for Memorials to the Throne, examining documents prepared for him by his secretaries or looking over accounts. He had had a kindly disposition. Never once did I hear him say an unkind word about anyone. Under most trying circumstances he spoke in his usual tone of voice to servants and subordinates. He never abused those who differed from him nor spoke reproachfully of those who had not the better of him in bitter contests. He was charitable. For many years he planned to give at least one-tenth of his income for philanthropic purposes but his contributions were usually in excess of this limit. As an instance of his charitable work, he continued every year until his death to send at least ten thousand wadded garments to poor people in Shantung in whom he had become interested while he was Taotai at Chefoo.

"This is Sheng Hsuan-huai as I knew him. His brilliant eyes, his keen face, his quick perception, none of these can be wrought into plastic bronze but they remain inscribed on the tablets of my memory and I consider it a high privilege to place them on record together with this appreciation of his life work, at the unveiling of this bronze statue erected in his memory."

FRENCH BUDGET UNBALANCED, BUT PASSED ANYWAY

Deputies Refuse To Accept Senate's Deletions

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—The Senate by 292 votes to two today passed the Budget as a whole and returned it to the Chamber of Deputies, where the Finance Committee is considering it.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—The passage of the Budget for 1923 by the Chamber of Deputies yesterday and the Senate today in no way clarifies the financial situation. It merely shows that both the Chamber and the Senate were determined to vote it, if possible duly balanced, before July 1, thus avoiding recourse to a seventh monthly vote account.

The position is that the Chamber voted the Budget and sent it to the Senate in January but it was not balanced, showing a deficit of nearly 4,000,000,000 francs. The Senate decided to show the Chamber how to balance the Budget, assigning the task to its Finance Committee, which, after four months of trimming and pruning converted the deficit into a surplus of 1,000,000,000 francs.

The Senate last week voted the Budget which was returned to the Chamber. The Chamber Finance Committee restored the credits suppressed by the Senate, including the Air Force estimates of 212,000,000, thus again converting the surplus into a deficit of 600,000,000 francs.

The Chamber after two late sittings voted the Budget in the face of a strong Radical-Socialist opposition. It also voted the proposal of the Government to extend the Budgetary provisions of 1923 to 1924, which M. Poincare in a letter describes as an exceptional measure designed to avoid the dangerous return to a monthly votes account.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—The Senate by 176 votes to 112 today rejected the proposal to strike out the Budget amendment making the 1923 Budget applicable to 1924.

M. Poincare had opposed the proposal and made it a matter of a vote of confidence.

FRENCH BUDGET

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, July 1.—The Senate has definitely adopted the 1923 Budget after abandoning, in view of the insistence of the Chamber, the proposal to charge to the account of the Budget for expenses recoverable from Germany 2,500,000,000 francs representing the service and interest on loans contracted on account of Germany.

POINCARE'S SPEECH ON RUHR CREDITS PLEASES FRENCH

9 Belgian Soldiers Killed, 25 Wounded By Bomb On Train

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—The Journal notes the considerable success gained by the Premier in his speech in the Senate yesterday on the occasion of the debate on the Ruhr credits.

The Intransigeant quotes a characteristic passage of M. Poincare's speech: "We shall evacuate the Ruhr only in proportion to payments as Germany did in 1870. If we cross back over the Rhine before this is done, it would cause it to be believed that Germany had revenged herself on us and inflicted humiliation on us: to what madness would not the Nationalist and military parties in Germany then give themselves up?" The Intransigeant emphasises the profound satisfaction with which the Assembly received this statement. The credits were voted unanimously, 228 Senators being present.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—The Senate vote on the Ruhr credits, which were unanimously passed yesterday, is the theme of admiring comments in the French press as the most striking manifestation since the war of the sacred union of the parties in Parliament, and as especially significant in that it follows the publication of a letter which the Pope addressed to Cardinal Gasparri on June 27 on the subject of reparations, in which His Holiness expressed the hope that Germany would show a disposition to pay her debt and that the Allies would consider whether it were necessary to maintain the occupation of the Ruhr as a form of guarantee.

This letter was scouted at the time by the French press, which interpreted it as a suggestion to submit Germany's capacity to pay to an impartial tribunal instead of the Reparations Commission, or, otherwise, to revise the Treaty of Versailles.

The papers today express the hope that the debate in the Senate will show the Holy See that it has made a mistake and that the world will appreciate the French Parliament's support of M. Poncare.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 30.—A bomb exploded on a train with Belgian soldiers going on furlough as it was emerging from Duisburg station. One coach was pulverised. Nine soldiers were killed and [illegible] wounded.

(Reuter's Service)

Coblence, June 30. — Drastic measures have been decided on by the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission in connection with the outrage at Duisburg.

Germans have been forbidden for a fortnight to cross the frontier between occupied and unoccupied Germany except in connection with food supply or a strong family reason. Pedestrians have been forbidden to circulate within the area of the outrage at night time. Motorcars, motorcycles and bicycles have been similarly prohibited in the day time. Cafes and places of entertainment will be closed. Officials and prominent persons will be arrested. Exceptional measures of control have also been taken regarding the circulation of persons on land, railways and rivers.

Reuter's correspondent at Brussels states that 20 hostages have already been taken.

boat to "down sail" so as to avert the danger ahead. The rescuing boat hastened to Captain Foster's aid and asked two volunteers to help to tow the Trevessa's boat back but found the volunteers too weak. One of the fishermen there upon climbed into the Trevessa's boat and with an amazing display of sheer strength directed her to the jetty.

All the survivors have departed on the warship, Colombo, for Mauritius. They have practically recovered. A thanksgiving service was held on the Island before the Colombo left.

LONDON 'TIMES' PESSIMISTIC ON CHINA'S FUTURE

Urges Powers To Frame Working Program For Country

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 2.—The Times, remarking the steadily worsening conditions of China, says that anarchy is becoming a settled habit. The paper presents a dismal picture of "shadowy Governments and shadowy authority," the desperate financial position and the lawless state of the country, which exist side by side with the industry of the people and their enthusiasm for education and modern ideas, and says that progress and anarchy, corruption and general aspiration are fantastically mingled.

With a view to restoring the respect for the power of the foreign Governments which the recent outrages, in which foreigners were affected, indicate is vanishing, the Powers are urged to agree to a progressive working policy for China. The journal [illegible] which would only make the situation far worse than now. It suggests [illegible] precautionary measure an increased number of gunboats on the Yangtsze and keeping the garrison at Tientsin at full strength. The Powers might deliberate profitably on means whereby the self-denying ordinances, imposed at Washington may be made effective for the assertion of joint authority and rights.

One simple measure urged for the restoration of authority is the replacement of the incompetent police on the Chinese railways by a native force, organised and disciplined by foreign inspectors representing the nationality chiefly interested in the particular railway concerned.

Consortium To Make Study Of China's Loans

a solution of the administrative problem.

The Consortium emphasise that the reorganisation of China's finances must come from China herself. Some measure of supervision would be necessary but it would be the minimum of control required to provide adequate security, without which it would be impossible to issue a foreign loan.

The Consortium's policy is to assist in building up a general credit for China on such secure foundations that all outside intervention may gradually be eliminated and entire control of the loan service and expenditure gradually pass into the hands of China herself.

Five trains are coming from Calgary, Lethbridge, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver, all Canadian points; four are coming from Chicago; two each from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Galveston and Dallas, combined; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City and Seattle; single trains are coming from Spokane, Portland, Denver and Pueblo, combined; Scoreo and Thermopolis, combined; Basin and other points, combined; Omaha and Lincoln, combined; Cleveland and Toledo, combined, and St. Louis and Kansas city, combined.

Tentative plans for special coach trains are being made from the following Montana points: Billings, Butte, Helena, Glacier Park, Kalispell and points west, Havre and points east, Great Falls, and from points in North and South Dakota.

At Shelby trackage facilities are being increased to take care of all special trains. All Pullman trains will be taken care of by additional facilities and will include accommodations for meals, sleeping quarters, ice and water and additional lights.

The Great Northern railway station in Shelby has been enlarged 125 feet in order to take care of the increased baggage and ticket trade. Merchandise and express facilities have been improved and enlarged. The merchandise track on the north side of the main line has been extended 1,400 feet and an additional spur of track of 1,000 feet has been provided. Four additional tracks have been laid at the western end of the city. A total of 3,500 feet of tracks will be available with the laying of these four new tracks. The entire arrangements will provide 14,000 feet of trackage at the western end of Shelby.

Tomorrow—July 4.—Jack Dempsey, holder of the world's heavyweight boxing title, will defend his crown against Tommy Gibbons, the St. Paul aspirant for heavyweight honors, and it is violating no secret to say that young Mr. Gibbons does not appear to have what might be called a promising chance of annexing.

From the following account of Dempsey's condition, as described by Damon Runyon, the New York sports writer, it would appear that Mr. Gibbons has even less chance than is generally supposed. Mr. Runyon is quite enthusiastic about the champion, as witness:

BY DAMON RUNYON

The writer watched Jack Dempsey box shortly before the heavyweight champion was called West to defend his title against Gibbons.

Dempsey worked with the negro heavyweight, Jamaica Kid, one of his old sparring partners. It was one of the fastest, roughest gymnasium bouts we have ever witnessed. There was more real slugging in it than you see in the average fight.

It is difficult for Dempsey to "pull punches" even in gymnasium boxing. This is shown by the condition of most of his sparring partners after they have worked with him any length of time. They are punched "soft." Few of them have been able to show any of their original ability when they return to actual fighting.

Two or three times Dempsey had Jamaica Kid punch drunk—in the same condition he so often had him when they were working together at Toledo before the Willard fight. The champion would grab the burly negro, hold him up, shaking him to clear his head. Then they would go on.

The writer has no hesitation in making the statement that Dempsey is today the nearest approach to perfection in his business that we have in the ring.

Watching the champion, the thought struck us that this was the same fellow we had seen some years back, a lumbering, shambling, wide-open dub, fighting against Wild Bert Kenney, Andre Anderson and John Lester Johnson—in the same two instances taking a considerable pounding.

It seemed almost incredible. Today Dempsey is the personification of grace in his movements. He is the same man, but not the same fighter—not by a hundred miles.

It has been said that a champion has one day, and only one day, when he is at the very peak of his form, that day the day he wins his championship. The writer believes that Dempsey is 50 percent ahead of his Toledo form, that he is today, if ever, at the very top of his form.

He is faster afoot, a faster puncher, a better boxer. Where he once started his punches with a swing, he is now a veritable sharpshooter with either hand, every punch short and true.

Dempsey is now twenty-seven years old. His body has trimmed down in maturity, has been finished off, so to speak. He has stopped growing.

Dempsey will now weigh not to exceed 190 pounds in actual fighting condition. A few years ago when he was still growing his weight would run over that mark.

In the days when the writer first saw Dempsey, and afterwards, he was clumsy in many ways, like a cub bear. He lacked assurance. Now he has a world of assurance. It shows in his boxing, in his manner of taking, in his general department.

The title of champion brought much of that to him. Then his theatrical experience, his travels abroad, helped. Not a highly educated fellow when he started out, Dempsey has picked up knowledge and polish. It has given him the confidence of a king.

Dempsey's present physical condition is due partly to the constant boxing he engaged in on his last theatrical tour and partly to his passion for exercise.

He was in New York only a few days on this last visit. Every day he was in a gymnasium working out. He seems to prefer boxing to every other form of exercise and will box with anyone who happens to be handy, from bantams up.

He does a great deal of walking. He has a system of calisthenics of his own that he employs in his room. But the boxing gloves are apparently his real enjoyment. He has improved his knowledge of boxing beyond belief.

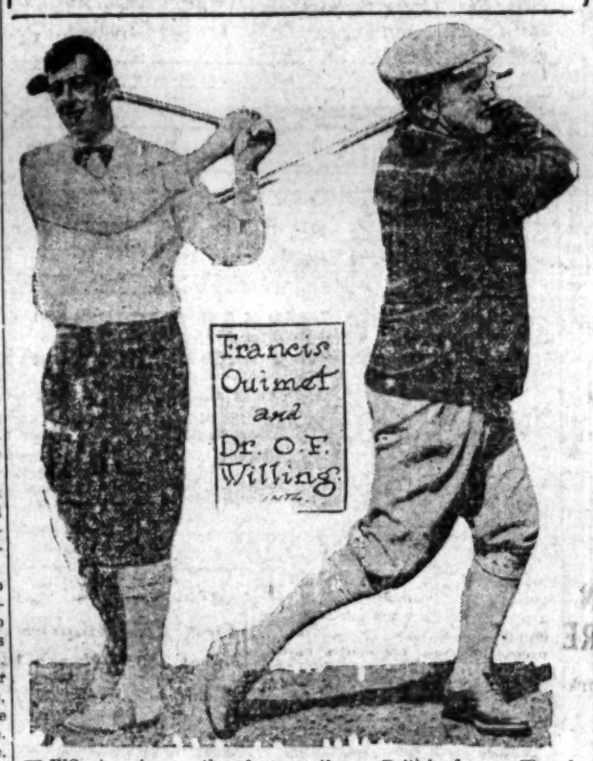
Ouimet And Willing



TWO Americans, the famous Francis Ouimet, of Brookline, Massachusetts, and the unknown Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Oregon, tied for the possession of the Royal St. George's Cup at Sandwich, England, the first time it had ever been won by any other than a British player. They beat the best of the English amateurs turning in cards of 153 for the 36 holes. In the play-off the brilliant Ouimet won the cup, doing the 18 holes in 77, while Dr. Willing turned in a card of 78.

S'HAI RIFLEMEN IN 'ALL COMERS' ANNUAL SHOOT

Finalists Get Gold Medals, Cups And Trophies

The Shanghai Rifle Association's "all comers" championship matches were held Saturday and Sunday at the Rifle Range. The first stage was shot Saturday, under good weather condition; much better than on Sunday, when the second, third and final stages were shot off. The final winners were Messrs. R. I. Ito, W. E. Sauer and G. M. Neal, who received gold medals, and Messrs. W. Lancaster and T. S. Perry, winners of cups.

Results of the second, third and final stages follow:

SECOND STAGE

Open only to the 24 competitors taking the highest place in Ranges 300-600 yards (ten shots each distance) the First Stage.

This was shot on Sunday, July 1 at 7 a.m. under unfavorable weather conditions. W. E. Sauer and R. I. Ito scored 90 each and the former won the special prizes for two stages combined with 192 points.

THIRD STAGE

Ranges 900-1000 yards (fifteen shots each distance).

Open only to the 18 competitors taking the highest places in the First and Second Stages combined.

This was shot on Sunday, July 1 at 9 a.m. under unfavorable weather conditions. G. M. Neal was high gun at 900 yards with 70 and Ito and Waung were next with 68 each. Sauer who was leading with 33 points, scored at this range 63, giving Ito a lead of 2 points. Sauer's total 255, Ito's 257, next came Neal with 249, and Lancaster 245.

At the 1000 yards Collaco was top with 67, Parry 64, Sauer 63, Ito and Waung 62 each. Adding this score with those of the previous stages Ito won the championship with 319 points and Sauer with 318.

After the names of the winners were declared by Mr. Collaco the Secretary, Major Steward presented the prizes to the successful competitors.

This competition was inaugurated in 1915 and the conditions were only two stages and any Government rifle permitted. The Committee last year decided to change the conditions and made it exactly on the same lines as the British .303 Rifle Championship which is to be shot for annually on the same lines as the Kings Prize at Bisley, except that any Government rifle is permitted.

HARDING TAKES DAY OFF, RESTS AT YELLOWSTONE

President Shows Great Interest In National Park's Wonders

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Yellowstone National Park, July 1.—President Harding today forgot politics and entered the nation's playground—Yellowstone National Park—to play and fish and watch the geysers 'play.'

The President, somewhat weary from the vigorous series of speeches he has made on his way across the continent, is thoroughly enjoying his rest in Yellowstone. Incidentally he is the third President of the United States to tour the park, being preceded by President U. S. Grant and President Roosevelt. Roosevelt, being an adopted Westerner, made two trips through the park in addition to spending considerable time in the mountainous and plains country adjoining the park.

The President, like all tourists, was tremendously interested in the geysers which are the most numerous and beautiful in the world. He was particularly interested in timing 'Old Faithful,' the famous geyser that has been erupting at intervals of a little over a minute since it was first seen, and the 'Minute Man,' which erupts every minute on the second.

The President was also greatly interested in the automotive means of transportation now used throughout the park. While some of the old picturesque aspects of the old style stage-coaches drawn by four and six horses are missing travel in the park is much faster and a great deal more convenient since the automobile lines replaced the horses a few years ago.

Anthracite Miners Threaten To Strike

(BY UNITED PRESS)
(Special To The China Press)

Scranton, Pa. July 2.—Anthracite coal miners in the Pennsylvania fields, the largest anthracite producing region in the United States, have threatened to strike unless their wages are increased at the expiration of their present agreement in August.

The announcement of the strike threat has caused appeals to be made from all sides requesting John Hays Hammond, the chairman of President Harding's coal commission, to take immediate action to bring the miners and mine owners together so as to prevent any interruption in work.

The announcement also created a flurry in the coal market and it is expected that the price will be boosted considerably as the August agreement period approaches unless the differences are settled in the near future.

How Receipts In F. A. Cup Final Will Be Distributed

London, May 21.—That there is money in the Cup ties gets another demonstration from the balancesheet of the Football Association. The financial results on the general account total:

£20,572 16s. 0d., including £7,705 10s. 2d., from the percentages in the competition proper of the F. A. Cup up to the fourth round, and £9,452 3s. 4d. from the one-third share of the gate receipts at the semi-final and final ties. The F. A. share of the gate at Wembley was £6,365 1s. 8d., which shows that the net receipts from the Wembley Cup final for the clubs and F. A. were just over £19,000.

The expenditure of £13,293 15s. included £2,032 19s. 2d. for salaries and wages. £1,800 1s. 1d. for printing and stationery £3,241 10s. 6d. for expenses of council, and £1,000 for endowing hospital bed in memory of Lord Kinnaird. The balance carried to surplus account is £7,279 1s. 9d. The international match account declares a surplus of £102 12s. 10d., as compared with £4,621 10s. 11d. the previous season, when the England v. Scotland match was played in England. The surplus will, however, be increased by the share of the gate receipts of the recent matches played in Brussels and Paris.

The assets of the Association are given at £65,443 8s. 4d., all in cash or gilt-edged investments, with the exception of a small amount for office furniture. This compares with a total of £53,642 4s. 6d. for the preceding year. There are, however, liabilities for income tax (two years), refund of Cup final tickets and a contingent guarantee of £10,000 to the British Empire Exhibition.

The clubs playing in the semi-final and final ties of the F. A. competition record the following sums: Bolton Wanderers, £8,070 16s. 11d.; West Ham United, £7,746 7s. 11d.; Sheffield United £1,705 15s. 4d.; Derby County, £1,381 6s. 4d.

For the clubs taking part in the same rounds in connection with the Amateur Cup, the following sums have been allocated: London Caledonians, £442 3s. 6.; Evesham Town £226 17s. 1d.; St. Albans City, £205 9s. 9d.; Cockfield £90 3s. 4d.

Agents Busy Trying To Organise New Government

(China Press Service)

Tientsin, July 1.—Forty-five legislators arrived here from Peking today. They were prevailed upon to proceed to the South where arrangements for the reopening of Parliament are being made.

Mr. Ting Chien-hsiang, special delegate of Tupan Lu Yung-hsiang of Chekiang, who recently came to Tientsin to invite the Parliamentarians to Hangchow, left for Peking yesterday. Mr. Ting will co-operate with General Chang Tso-lin's emissary in working for the proposed shifting of the legislature to the South.

Peking, July 1.—It is reliably reported that a politico-military conference will be held at Paotingfu sometime next week to discuss the following questions: 1. The drafting of a permanent Constitution, 2. Presidential election, 3. Governmental finances, 4. Situations in Kwangtung, Fengtien Fukien and Chekiang.

It is understood that twelve provinces will be represented at the forthcoming confab, namely, Chihli, Shantung, Honan, Kiangsu, Anhwei, Kiangsi, Hupeh, Shensi, Kansu, Sinkiang, Shansi and Fukien.

In the meantime, the Tientsin clique is working hard for the electoral campaign. It has been agreed that when General Tsao Kun becomes President, General Chi Shih-yuan, Tuchun of Kiangsu, will be appointed Inspector-General of Super-Tuchun of Kiangsu, Anhwei and Kiangsi. General Feng Yu-hsiang, the Christian General, will be given the Super-Tuchunship fo Chihli, Shantung and Honan, which post is being held by General Tsao Kun. General Wu Pei-fu will retain the Super-Tuchunship of Hupeh and Hunan. A new post, that of Inspector-General of Shensi and Kansu, will be created in favor of General Wang Cheng-ping, Civil Governor of Chihli.

The twelve provinces referred to above undertake to raise the total amount of $3,500,000 to finance the electoral campaign for the Presidency. They are classified into three grades. The first grade will have to pay $500,000 each, while the quotas for the second and third grade provinces are $300,000 and $100,000 respectively.

Peking, July 1.—General Tsao Kun has dispatched a special delegate, Mr. Chow Mong-yen, to Peking to invite Doctor Wellington Koo to proceed to Paotingfu for conference. Doctor Koo has refused the invitation on the ground of illness.

Asked when he will accept the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, Doctor Koo declares that he will not assume office until there is a semblance of Government in Peking.

Parliament Still Lacks A Quorum

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 29.—In Parliament yesterday there were again insufficient members present to form a quorum for the Constitutional Conference, the number present being 477.

An informal meeting was held instead. At this Mr. Wu Ching-lien announced that he had been severely attacked by certain local newspapers which had accused him of having stolen the special seal of the Presidential Election College. He explained that when Parliament was dissolved in 1913 this seal was kept by the Ministry of the Interior and when Parliament was restored last year it should have been handed to the Speaker of the Senate, but as the Senate had no Speaker he had kept it and had not yet handed it over to the Senate. He said that it was still kept by the House of Representatives. Mr. Wang Chi-hsiang corroborated what Mr. Wu had said. Delegates were then appointed who went to see the seal and found that it was intact where Mr. Wu Ching-lien had placed it.

JAPANESE URGE CHAMBER HEADS TO END BOYCOTT

Situation Leading To Grave Dangers, They Warn Chinese

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 1.—The following is a translation of a letter from Mr. Teruo Tanabe, the Chairman of the Union of the Japanese Chambers of Commerce in China to the Chairman of the Union of the Chinese Chambers of Commerce in Peking:—

The boycott of Japanese goods now prevailing in various parts of your country violates the stipulations of the treaties of commerce and navigation, contracted between your country and ours, and are illegal and discourteous acts, ignoring international friendship and cordial relations. It amounts to an annoucement of the severance of economic relations with Japan by public bodies in various parts of your country, which is an extreme measure, the next step to which would be a declaration of war and the breaking off of international relations between China and Japan. Such a situation is indeed a lamentable one for the future. It is not only our people who suffer from the anti-Japanese boycott but also your own. Your Central Government and local authorities have not taken any effective steps to check these movements, and, moreover, it is reported that even members of your union, who intelligently and wisely represent your merchants and manufacturers, are concerned in and helping such movements. Such action is most regrettable. On the other hand, Japanese residents in your country continue to maintain an attitude of patience and perseverance. However, the situation tends to become dangerous, and if the movements are carried further, it is to be feared that they will lead to unexpectedly serious results. Therefore, it is highly desirable that your union shall take steps to endeavor to stop such movements at an early date by explaining to the Chinese General Chambers of Commerce and merchants and manufacturers as well as the general public that such movements are detrimental to their real interests. On behalf of all the Japanese Chambers of Commerce in China, I beg to request that you will give us all assistance in this matter.

Before the assumption of office by his successor, Ma Teng-yin, chief of staff of his yamen, would be in charge of the office and has been authorised to hand over the seal to his successor.

Bids To Be Asked For Two Pacific Shipping Lines

New York, July 1.—Bids will be entered for at least two of the Shipping Board's passenger lines, recently offered for sale, according to a report on excellent authority. The lines are the Pacific Mail and Admiral Oriental, operating from San Francisco and Seattle to China, Japan and the Philippines. Each has five of the 535 foot type combination passenger and freight vessel.

A year ago a syndicate was formed on the Pacific coast to take over these lines if the subsidy bill were passed. It was known as the Fleishhacker Syndicate, after Herbert Fleishhacker, president of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank of San Francisco. Whether this group again has become active was not learned.

The board also owns the vessels of the Munson Line running to South America and of the United States Lines on the North Atlantic route, but these two are known to have been less successful financially than the transpacific lines, which regularly, for a long period, have been running full with passengers and usually also with freight.

There will be bids for some of the board's freight lines. Although the possibility of extensive sales of the freighters is not conceded in shipping circles, the terms of the board's advertisement are such that wide latitude is given to prospective bidders. Offers are being drawn up that will hold out the greatest possible assurance of successful operation of the lines when acquired by the private organisations, and their acceptance by the board is problematical. Chairman Lasker on an earlier occasion referred to some bids for Shipping Board vessels as "facetious."

The situation with respect to American freight services in foreign trade is most unfavorable, in view of the low level of rates, the meager movement of freight and the high American operating costs as compared with foreign operating costs. But operating differentials are not important with respect to passenger vessels, as William J. Love vice-president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and supervisor of passenger services for the Shipping Board, pointed out yesterday when the reports that offers would be made for the lines were brought to his attention. He said he did not doubt that the offers were being prepared.

The greatest differences in operating costs come in pay to ship's personnel and the large majority of men on a passenger liner are in the steward's department. There is no particular national level of pay for stewards, and they receive about the same wages on liners of all flags.

In their weekly report on the Shanghai Silk market, Messrs. William Little and Company write as follows:

Rose-Loving Burglars Visit British Flower Shop

Burglars, of an odd turn of mind for burglars, paid a visit Sunday night to the premises of the British Flower shop. They didn't overlook the main chance altogether, however, for besides a number of odds and ends they carried away a clock and a silver cup, but they didn't even touch the safe apparently and this contained a considerable sum of cash.

What makes the whole thing seem queer to the police authorities who are investigating the offense is the question why a burglar should want a gorgeous bouquet of yellow tea roses. This, a special order, was among the loot taken.

A large number of people, including physicians and laymen, attended Sunday at the official openings of the Chinese Red Cross Society's Summer Diseases Hospital at 316 Tientsin Road and the Infection Diseases Hospital at 545 Thibet Road.

Much interest was displayed in the work of the two hospitals, which do a great deal of important service during the summer months. Last year the Red Cross Society's hospital treated 1,009 cases, including 525 cholera cases in which saline transfusions were given. Besides this the hospital treated some 2,988 out-patients. Those applying at the Infectious Diseases Hospital numbered 2,590, more than half being serious cases.

Dr. B. H. Stanley Aylward is the visiting physician at the Red Cross Summer Diseases Hospital and there are six nurses. At the Infectious Diseases Hospital there are two resident doctors and ten voluntary medical workers, with a staff of eight nurses, whose number can be increased if necessary.

The New Ruhr Crisis

If the Diplomatic Correspondent of The London Observer is accurate in his forecast regarding the immediate future, Great Britain and France are about to part company. "It is very probable that the British Government will publicly declare that the present policy of France in the Ruhr occupation is leading to the ruin of Europe and that Britain will start negotiations with Germany on the basis of the German reparations offer of June 7." This correspondent further intimates that Britain may call a conference of neutral states for the purpose of making a settlement with Germany apart from France.

The article has deeply offended the French press which is demanding a disavowal on the part of the British Government of any such drastic program. The difficulties in the way of a separate settlement with Germany by the British seem at first glance to be insurmountable unless the British are willing to forego practically all their reparations claims. How can they settle otherwise, while France holds the Ruhr? And the French are a unit for holding the Ruhr until Germany pays up. Further they are apparently too strong to be driven out by force.

M. Poincare's speech in which he told the French Senate that "We shall evacuate the Ruhr only in proportion to payments" was received with profound satisfaction, and the necessary credits were voted unanimously, a most unusual demonstration of French unity.

There the matter must stand for the moment, but the swelling tide of British dissatisfaction with the French course is becoming more manifest every day, even if the statement of the Observer's correspondent shall be for the present disavowed.

Lloyd George in a recent article gave voice to this feeling when he said: "There's a swagger of brutality about certain French actions in the Ruhr which betokens recklessness .... Russian arrogance in its crudest days furnished no such example of clumsy and shortsighted inaptitude. It gives point to Lord Robert Cecil's observation in the House of Commons that it is very difficult to reconcile the French attitude with the conviction that [illegible] settlement."

As we have remarked before now that Henry Ford has announced his candidacy for the Presidency you may anticipate a rattling good campaign.

Mr. Wilson was elected on the slogan: "He Kept Us Out Of War."

Mr. Harding was elected on the slogan: "A Home Folks Man On The Front Porch."

Mr. Ford has ample opportunity to think up some pulling slogan such as "It gets There!", "Hitch Your Star To A Ford," or "More Miles Per Gallon."

Pa Jongg, who has voted the Democratic ticket even for Bryan, is almost on the point of deserting the fold in favor of Henry and is busily thinking up slogans for him. At last reports he was holding conferences with Freddie Bills on the formation of a "Ford for President" Club.

At the heigth of patriotic fervor some Americans become slightly obnoxious on the "Glorious Fourth" just as some British become obnoxious on Empire Day when they assume a supercilious would-like-to-be superiority over their American cousins. On the Fourth last year one of our fellow countrymen got a little too much firewater under his belt and proceeded to explain to a British friend that this was THE day with a lotta unnecessary details.

Our British friend carefully adjusted his monocle, stroked his chin very thoughfully and thanked the American for his kindly given information.

"I'm jolly well glad to hear it, you know," he finally exclaimed. "I've always labored under the delusion that this was Great Britain Thanksgiving Day."

Poison Gas Fumes Now Aid Medicine

BY JOHN W. HARRINGTON

Poison gases invened to slay are just completing their first year's apprenticeship to the arts of peace. It is awonderful record, too, which they have made under the guiding wand of scientific research. Medicine, agriculture, industry have been largely benefited by the evil genie let loose for the first time from its iron bottles when the Germans gassed the British at Ypres.

Whatever may be the merits of the controversy between leading chemists and the powers that be as to the ethics of using poison gases in battle ,the outstanding fact is that the sums spent in learning how to make these death-dealing vapors have not been lost. It is estimated that fully two hundred important uses have been found for the lethal vapors and that many more will be found.

When the order was issued by General Pershing that the Chemical Warfare Service should disand devote itself to defense and scientific research, many persons thought that the service was to become a withered military arm. The Government did let its chief have $600,000 for research, but cut down the personnel almost to the vanishing point. This appropriation gave to Brig. Gen. Amos A .Fries, in charge of operations, the opportunity to prove that chemistry in peace was just as efficient as chemistry in war.

When it was decided that poison gas had to be used by the American forces, chemists, physicians and pharmacologists selected ingredients which would suffocate or blind or kill if vaporised. Afterward the same men studied war gases from the angle of the healing art. One of the leading schools of medicine holds that like cures like, and there is an adage of long standing that one may be cured by a hair from the dog that bit him.

It had been noted that the men who worked in the poison gas factories of Great Britain and the United States were not disabled by influenza when that disease was sweeping over the world like a plague. This applied particularly to works where such gases as hydrogen sulphide, chloropicrin and chlorine were generated. Experiments demonstrated that chlorine was a useful remedy in dealing with colds, grippe and influenza. In large quantities it was suffocating, but circulated in homeopathic quantities it was a balm instead of a bane. In the war areas of Europe there had been comparatively little influenza, ascribed to sanitation and medical care; but now the pathologist believes that some of these gases which bring death when projected in large quantities may be germicides when diffused in small quantities.

WHAT THE FIGURES SHOW

We have heard much of war gases bringing on tuberculosis and of wargassed veterans going to the dry climate of Arizona for relief. Investigation is said to show that this popular assumption has little basis in fact.

"Among the 70,552 men who had been gassed in action in 1918," reported the Surgeon General of the United States, "only 173 cases of tuberculosis occurred. The number of cases of tuberculosis for each 1,000 men gassed was 2.45. Since the annual rate of occurrence of tuberculosis among enlisted men serving in Europe for 1918 was 3.50 and in 1919 4.30 per thousand, it would seem to be apparent that tuberculosis did not occur any more frequently among soldiers who had been gassed than among those who had not been."

According to the Medical Director attached to the Chemical Warfare Service, this shows "that in the year 1918 there were one and one-half times as many cases of tuberculosis per thousand among all troops in France as there were among those gassed, and in 1919 there were more than one and three-quarters as many tuberculosis cases among all troops as there were among gassed troops. This means that if the gassings were not an actual deterrent to tuberculosis the small percentgae of tubercular cases among the gassed can only be accounted for through the care those patients received in the hospitals."

Recent experiments of the John M[illegible] or Infectious Diseases showed that a 1 percent solution of mustard gas containing virulent human tuberculous bacilli, when injected into the veins of guinea pigs, prevented the development of tuberculosis, and that mustard gas in solutions of one part to a thousand had a distinct retarding influence upon the dread disease.

Dr. Reginald H. Meade, who made an elaborate investigation which he has summarised in a communication to the Journal of the Missouri Medical Society, says that Colonel Turk, in France during an epidemic of acute infections of the body's air passes, subjected his men to light fumes of war gases as a cure and preventive with encouraging results.

It will be remembered that just before the armistice reports were printed concerning the discovery of the most potent war gas yet discovered. A small quantity was said to be enough to wipe out a town of four or five thousand persons. Long after the war the inventor, Professor of Chemistry at Northwestern University, in whose honor this death-dealing agent was called Lewisite, showed a small bottle of dark-brown liquid to the writer. The bottle was enclosed in several other glass containers, all elaborately sealed, and these in turn were kept in a heavy steel case. A minute quantity of Lewisite put in an explosive shell—a casualty list in itself—was regarded as the most terrible weapon of chemical warfare. Even the formula for the manufacture of the compound was kept secret until last year. It is mainly composed of arsenic. Experiments now indicate that it may become a valuable remedy for treating paresis. Of forty-two paretics treated with Lewisite, twenty-one were discharged as cured, and the condition of seven was much improved.

Although the international conventions forbid the employment of noxious gases in warfare, the vapors may still be an ever-present help in time of riot. Police departments are adopting tear gas for the dispersing of mobs. Even if only a small quantity of this gas is released, it causes the eyes to water so much that there is nothing left for rioters to do but flee, "piping their lachrymal glands like mad." Sneeze gas can be used for the same purpose. A suggestion also has been made that the suicide rate would be much lessened if a small quantity of sneeze gas were put into ordinary illuminating gas as a deterrent.

War gases have been used in attacking outlaws in their strongholds. A score or so of banks have protected their vaults in the same way. Should an intruder try to enter, an electric current would explode a bottle and drive him weeping from the scene.

Undoubtedly effective work can be done with war gases in the extermination of animal and insect pests, as these vapors are more powerful and more easily modified along the line of safety for human beings than any other forms of fatal fumes. The service has devised a method of spraying orchards and fields with finely distributed and well-diluted chemical agents in the form of dusting powders. In co-operation with the Air Service it conducted successful experiments at Dayton from the McCook Field. The service hopes to develop an effective technique in the extermination of such pests as the boll weevil and the grasshopper. It has been asked by the Bureau of Insular Affairs to give a hand in the destruction of locusts and has sent an officer to the Philippine Islands to begin work. The service also is aiding Hawaiian planters in a warfare against rats, which cause heavy losses every year on the sugar plantations, as well as menace health by their tendency to carry bubonic [illegible] especially those which have their nests in tangled swamps, can be reached by poison gas.

A NEW FIELD FOR GASES

As fumigants for the destruction of disease germs and of rodents and in the holds of ships the poison gases are entering on a new field of usefulness. Quarantine officials and commercial vermin exterminators for years have used hydrocyanic gas, which is so highly poisonous that human life is always in jeopardy when it is employed. Recently there have been reports in the newspapers of the deaths of persons affected by such fumes when used in apartments below theirs, although every precaution was said to have been taken. Experiments have shown that tear gas will kill off rats, roaches and other vermin without injury to human beings near by.

The service is conducting researches to devise means for the extermination of the teredo worm which eats into wooden piles of piers and into ship timbers. It also hopes to develop an effective paint to drive away barnacles from ship bottoms. Millions of dollars are lost every year through these marine pests.

Both the Chemical Warfare Service and several commissions in various States are seeking to develop means for putting the mosquito out of commission through the use of poison gases. Experiments at Atlantic City are especially promising.

The first war gas used by the Germans was just plain chlorine, released in a primitive fashion and borne on the wind to the unsuspecting enemy. This was later employed in the manufacture of more complicated fumes and a good technique for making chlorine cheaply and in large quantities was devised at Edgewood Arsenal, near Baltimore, Md. The result has been a substantial reduction in the cost of chloride of lime, bleaching powders and other chlorine compounds, so that the American manufacturing chemist has been able to meet foreign competition in those lines more effectively than he could before the war.

It also was noted at Edgewood Arsenal that the brick work of units where phosgene, one of the early war gases, was made took on a ghastly white. Experiments demonstrated that phosgene was a powerful bleaching agent for earth and sand, a discovery which has been utilised with much profit by the glass manufacturers, who thereby are able to bleach sand to the finest degree of whiteness before fusing it with alkali.

Glass Of Utmost Clearness

This is a war by-product for which American makers of lenses and spectacles are grateful, and there are many other manufacturers who need a glass of the utmost clearness. Phosgene was used to a limited extent in the making of dyes before the war, but the demand for it was not great, owing to the high cost of manufacture and the difficulty of preventing dangerous explosions. Researches at Edgewood cheapened the cost and developed a safer technique in manufacturing. Phosgene yields a beautiful green color, often in demand.

As the service could spend funds for gas defense, it devoted much time and energy to the perfection of the gas mask. When the European war closed the United States Army mask was an excellent one, in which the wearer could breathe fairly well and could even talk. Only a few masks of this type reached the other side.

The service undertook to improve upon the latest regulation mask. Citizens, sometimes soldiers, who should have known better, were employing army masks when they entered smoky buildings or mines, and the outcome was often fatal. The Chemical Warfare Service has now developed a mask which protects against all gases, smokes and vapors likely to be met in fire fighting and industrial work. The canister is filled with pumice stone impregnated with cobaltous chloride and other ingredients, and is much like the mask previously perfected by the Bureau of Mines. The new mask can be used wherever there is sufficient oxygen to support life. That is, it filters out harmful ingredients and permits the purified air to be breathed.

The canister, instead of being in front of the wearer, as in the old type army masks, is under the left arm, which makes for greater freedom of motion. The filling protects against the carbon monoxide of the mine or the automobile exhaust, chlorine, ammonia, carbon tetrachloride and smoke. As there is a layer of cotton filter in the canister, the protection against smoke is especially effective. Factories, steel works, mines and chemical plants find this mask of great value.

Across The Breakfast Table

By Mr. And Mrs. W. L. George

Facing Temptation

Mr. George: You know, I rather admire Mamie. She's so young, and yet she has herself so well in hand. I told you that there's a married man who wants her to elope with him, saying he'll marry her after he gets his divorce, and I'm pretty sure that she's in love with him. At any rate, none of the young men who are intersted in her get much of a chance. And yet, though she won't elope she keeps him as a friend. What it means is that Mamie is facing temptation in the bravest way.

Mrs. George (contemptuous): Playing with fire! If she means to run away with him she ought to drop him. In fact she hasn't the courage to do either. You call it facing temptation, but in reality it's enjoying temptation. Mamie loves the feeling of power which she derives from the attraction she knows she exercises over this man. She enjoys the restraint which she imagines she is practising. She tells herself How strong I am! How well I face a difficult situation! Vanity, that's all it is, vanity.

Mr. George: One woman tearing another woman to pieces. If Mamie ran away with this man you'd say she was immoral. Since she doesn't run away with him you say she's vain. Give him up! It's absurd to say one must cut oneself off from people who tempt one. If I were....I mean to say, if people did that we should know only the people who were unattractive. What's the matter with you is that you're afraid of temptation because you're not sure that you'd have the strength to face it.

Are Insects Cruel?

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"A friend relates the following: Last Summer his attention was attracted by the slaughter wrought upon a large number of caterpillars on and under a vine covering the front of his porch by an insect resembling a slender wasp. Its onslaught was sudden and ferocious, and it left its victims disemboweled and in a generally dismembered state. To all appearances there was no feeding upon any parts of the larvae, and certainly no oviposition. All the earmarks indicated wanton, purposeless destruction—a notion I am unable to square with my studies of nature's economy. What was the logical end in view here?"

There was no logical end in view. Logic is a human invention—and the highest—but nature knows nothing of it. Logic is the science of inference, and inference is the work of reason, but nature does not reason. She does not have to. If nature reasoned she would immediately commit suicide, so terrible would her wastefulness, heartlessness and blundering appear when submitted to logical analysis.

However, man, with all his equipment of logic and reason is not always better than nature in these things, while it must be confessed that your friend's wasp-like insect with an apparent murder complex, seems disheartenlingly human in some ways. The qualifying adjective 'apparent' must be employed in favor of the wasp, for it is more than doubtful if that insect ever indulges in wanton destruction of the sort of which members of our race have been guilty. If the wasp has a glimmer of reason it is of so low an order that it could hardly be regarded as making the insect subject to conviction on circumstantial evidence of cruelty.

It is by attributng human qualities, motives and impulses to these underling creatures that we often succeed in tormenting ourselves with misplaced and wasted sympathies. We thus set up in imagination moral monsters of the lower world that have no existence. Thus there is a variety of wasp which actually bears the title of "cruel," as a surname—Psammochares atrox—somewhat as an ancient king of Castile was called Pedro the Cruel (atrox). But probably the wasp is no more truly cruel than is a Brazilian fig killing a palm by suffocation.

I think you may be sure that the wasp seen by your friend was simply following its instinct without any wantonness. It was not running amuck. Your friend should have studied its doings longer and in more detail. He would probably have found that eventually the creature carried off parts of its slain victims to stock its nest with food for its larvae. In fact, it is not clear that it did not carry away small bits without the observer's notice. Caterp'llars are favorite game food for several species of wasps.

Even if it be admitted that the wasp kept on killing the caterpillars after more than enough has been slain to stock its nest, we can hardly bring a murder indictment aganst it—at least not until we are able to prove that it possessed a considerable degree of reason, and was capable of drawing pretty long inferences. It would only have been doing what inanimate nature does all the time, viz.: wasting material.

Still, I don't wish to be dogmatic, and I willingly admit that there are some of the doings of wasps that at least bear considerable resemblance to the results of reasoning. For instance, there is very strong testimony in support of the assertion that a certain caterpillar-catching wasp (Ammophila) has been seen using a pebble for a hammer, or a ram, to pound down the earth over its finished nest. The insect is described as holding the pebble between its mandibles and striking with it, and acting startlingly suggestive of a reasoning being.

At any rate, it is to be hoped that the power of imagination is not developed in the wasps that capture spiders and other insects, sting them in the cerebral ganglion to produce motionlessness but not death, and then store them away, in that helpless state, to be devored by the growing larvae! Yet, though in us imagination is a highly developed faculty, we slowly boil living lobsters, while we shut up the imagination like a child that shouldn't be allowed to look on.

Great and good is nature, and great and good is man; but let us pray that there may be something greater and better than either.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in ivilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

SIKHS TESTIFY IN MURDER CASE AT BRITISH COURT

Police Court Trial Of Two Indians Continues Today

Examination of a number of Indian witnesses was conducted before Mr. D. R. Cooke, Magistrate, yesterday in the British Police Court, where Warrian Singh and Kataria Singh are charged with the murder of a fellow countryman, Arjan Singh, whose body was found in a creek near Yu Yuen Road, weighted down with stones, on June 13.

Mr. Eardley Maitland appeared to prosecute and Mr. J. G. Priestwood for the defense.

Evidence of identification of the body was given by Sewa Singh and by Katar Singh, a Sikh constable. Mr. Priestwood cross-examined both severely but they were positive that the body found was that of Arjan Singh, claiming that they could identify it by the features, hair and an iron bangle which was on the right wrist.

Chanen Singh, a watchman, said that he last saw Arjan Singh at the Central police station on April 24 at 4 p.m. He had been standing there with Kaher Singh, a constable. The witness had previously worked in a mill in Robinson Road which he said he left because Kataria Singh accused him, Arjan Singh and another Sikh of stealing a box.

Sikh Constable Kehar Singh said he know the deceased, and saw him on April 24 at the Central station. The accused, Warrian Singh, was there, and witness had a conversation with Arjan Singh and also with Warrian Singh.

The latter said that a man was going to Mexico and that he was taking Arjan to get that job as watchman. He said it was a little further away from his watchman's place in the Bubbling Well district. Witness was asked to go with them to get the job, and he went. They boarded the car, and at a shop they bought rice and potatoes.

Warrian Singh bought two lots of samshu and Arjan Singh was told if he wanted more wine he (Warrian) had it at home, hot. The three left the shop, and went westwards, towards Warrian Singh's house, but witness returned to the station. He did not know where the deceased and the prisoner went. Witness left them together. Warrian's brother was working as a watchman with the accused Kataria Singh. Witness went with the two men as Arjan Singh was a friend of his and he wanted to see him get a job. He had never seen the deceased since.

Cross-examined, witness stated he took no wine himself that day. was perfectly sober, and had only come out of the hospital that day. He had nothing against Warrian Singh and he was not a friend of the accused. About 29th or 30th of April he heard that Arjan Singh was missing. The senior havildar had told him that Arjan Singh had killed Kataria Singh, that Arjan Singh had gone away, and that as the latter was a friend of his he had better go and make inquiries as to where he is.

He did not tell you that Arjan Singh was missing? Yes, and if I did not find him out I would get into trouble.

Why do you suggest that you would be in trouble if you did not find out? Because he was my friend, I had taken him to Capt. Barrett, given in his name, and gave myself as security for him to get a watchman's job.

Is that your best answer as to why you should be in trouble if Arjan Singh was not found? Yes.

What trouble would you get into—what trouble did the havildar mean? I cannot say.

Witness added that about April 30 or May 1 he found that Kataria Singh was alive, and all the officers knew the fact. That was why he did not report the fact.

Can you explain why your superior officer should tell you what was not true? I was surprised when I found that Kataria Singh was alive, and I spoke to the Jemadar.

Witness was sure of the date, April 24, as he had been fined $10 by Capt. Barrett that day for allowing a watchman who was in custody to go free.

The case was then adjourned until this morning.
